The intention is to trigger

a deep knowing, either by your inner validation or stark opposition to what I've written – all in an effort to direct you closer to the truest essence of the soul you are.

I do hope you find even one gem that affirms the truth that you,

North Node in Pisces conjunct Ascendent in Pisces

The North Node talks of the qualities to move toward in order to obtain soul growth in this lifetime. With this placement in Pisces in the 12th, your inner compass is pointing to qualities of unconditional acceptance, freedom, spirituality, forgiveness, creativity, endlessness and surrender.

It speaks volumes to have the NN conjunct the ASC in the very late degrees of Pisces, which talks of completion of a cycle and becoming a channel for inspiration to flow through.

You're encouraged to learn how to release control and trust the forces of the universe implicitly — and your place in it — developing a truly authentic spiritual practice which you can embody (ASC) and present to the world.

The connection you have to the collective is so natural and nothing you have to try for. The more you relax and trust, the more your are calibrating yourself with your destiny and the messages you are here to bring.

There's an all-knowing about you, and the awesome energy you have, including the Sun in Capricorn, Mercury and Venus in Aquarius talks of mastery in grounding the spiritual/multi-dimensional nature of the Universe into this physical realm.

With Jupiter in the 1st and Neptune in the 10th (the traditional and modern trulers of Pisces, respectively), this shows that as you embody (1st house) this trust, this surrender, this innate spiritual connection, you'll leave a legacy (10th house/Capricorn) which benefits the collective implicitly.

Your NN sextiles your Moon in Scorpio which we'll talk about soon, which suggests a need for attunement to your emotional body, to your subconsious programming, combined with repeated episodes of surrender to lead you to where you need to be. It's all very innate within.

2nd House of Values / Value Taurus + Gemini

In work readings, it's important to look at the 2nd house of values because all that you hope to attract will depend on your value system.

Your 2nd house is mostly Taurus (quality, solid foundations, patience, dilligence, Mother Gaia, groundedness and hardwork), with some Gemini (communication, mental processes, duality, ideas, community, curiousity and logic).

What's interesting is the rulers of Taurus and Gemini — Venus and Mercury — are both placed in Aquarius, which points once again to themes of the collective, spirituality, total authentic expression and free love, essentially. It's kinda beautiful actually.

What this says is the more personal value you actively place on these Aquarian themes — of a better future, of breakthroughs, of your fellow (wo)man, of your friends, of freedom of expression of yourself and acceptance of others however they are, and a level of detachment — the more value returns to you in whatever way is meaningful/valuable to you.

As you gear your mind (Gemini/Mercury) toward quality over quanity (Taurus), taking your time to lay solid foundations (within yourself first, then your work) and considering your plan strategically, whilst envisioning the best outcome for both yourself and others (Aquarius), trusting (Pisces) that you will be supported by spirit, you'll always have what you need to live comfortably (2nd house).

2nd House of Values / Value Mercury in Aquarius 11th House Venus in Aquarius 12th House

Furthermore, with the personal planets of Venus and Mercury in the 11th and 12th respectively, there's a need for detachment when it comes to the results/feedback you receive, and what you expect from others.

With the Moon in Scorpio in the 8th squaring Mercury, you might feel like you're owed something (the 8th house rules other peoples resources/money from other people), but your best bet into getting what you want is to actually release the expectation of getting it.

(Contradictory, and seemingly impossible, I know.)

With a Pisces ASC conjunct the NN, as you hold a light, mutable template for who you are, allowing yourself to wear one hat one day, and another the next, you kinda learn to let go of rigid expectations of yourself, and in doing so, allowing others to be who they are (11th house Aqua), you begin to find that everyone wins, and you'll gain massive respect from others as you do. Also, your ability to trust in the process and the intelligence of the Universe (Pisces) and embodying it will prove to be a beacon for those around you, and as they see the peace you eminiate, you lead by energetic example.

As you open up and let yourself be free, you let unpredictable blessings rain down on you and those you value.

Learn to ride the waves of inspiration — creativity is never linear, and the more you adjust your operations to a non-linear mode, the more authentic your creative expression.

MC in Sag tight conjunction with Uranus and Saturn

Uranus conjunct Saturn on the Galactic centre - wow! Talks of work-related breakthroughs and some really genius ideas. My advice would be to approach your work/career with a quest-like mentality, trusting that synchronicities and lessons can appear around every turn.

Travelling for work can really open your perspective to any endeavour you wish to embark on. They say that one needs to master the lessons of the 9th house — higher learning, expansion, experience, culture, teachers — and take those lessons into the 10th to create the legacy and reach work fulfillment.

With Saturn here, the lesson aspect will be extra important, so it's important to look at set-backs (Saturn) as learning opportuntities (9th house/Sag), which will propel you forward in time.

Sometimes it may seem like nothing is happening, then suddenly, out of nowhere — boom!

Uranus is the higher octave of Mercury, so if you find yourself stuck considering potentials, pull back and call upon your higher self to guide you, to show you a sign. The Universe will provide, granted you're open to receiving.

Likewise, you can make some major leaps in your work when going on inner vision-quests (long-distance travel (9th house) not always required).

When you feel inspired, do some research on the Galactic centre and take some time to meditate on what you absorb. There will be something in that study (and all study really) which will benefit your journey (9th house), even if not conscious immediately.

This energy is also opposite your Chiron placement (which we'll talk of soon), which can speak of major mental breakthroughs regarding work when connecting to cosmic intelligence.

Neptune in the 10th (Cap), Sun in 11th (Cap) Mercury & Venus in Aquarius

Neptune in the 10th talks of bringing your creativity into the world for all to see. Hopefully that's what you're planning to do with your new business ventures.

The placement in Capricorn brings about an air of mastery. This takes time, so don't be afraid to produce 'bad work' — all work will contribute to you mastering your craft over time. Have patience with the process. Learn to love the process, not just the outcome. That sounds cliche but it's really important to know that the road is long and you have time.

Gear your creations into bettering humanity and in turn, you will better yourself. You don't have to fix the whole world, just work on your little corner. The ripple effects will be significant. You might not always know the positive effects your work will have on the collective, so try not to be too hard on yourself if you don't receive immediate validation from outside influences. You will naturally influence so again, develop a stategy for mitigating the need for validation.

Cultivate a spiritual practive of intention setting when you sit down to work. Pull in the aspect of your higher self to help you with your creative endeavours — try not to do things with mental force to reach and end goal. The end goal is elusive — again, try and cultivate a quest-like mentality for all your creative endeavours. This will open you up to alternate dimensions where all your creations are already manifest, and you fall into a flow where it all comes together naturally. As you may have noticed, Trust is a big theme for you.

Mastery comes when you let others in your team/atmosphere flourish, letting their innate talents to assist with the creation of something beautiful, and letting them be different — focus on their light. You will receive great respect when you do. (See that 2nd house bit).

South Node in Virgo

With the South Node in Virgo, there may be a natural tendencies to take on too many responsibilities, over-work, be extremely critical of oneself or others, or strive for perfection, anything else falling short.

The South Node qualities feel very natural to us, it's the North Node qualities which take more conscious effort.

Be mindful of being too practical when forseeing how things are going to play out on the work front. As you've read so far with you other placements, there's a major element of mysticism working with you in this life time and the more you allow Universal forces to support you, the farther you can ride the wave.

That doesn't mean you ignore logic/the details — with Virgo 6th house these are important — it's about balancing the need for answers right away with a knowing they'll come when they should.

It's when we release the lower qualities of the South Node, and embrace the higher qualitites of the North Node, that they then begin to work coherently together, and the higher aspects of the South Node support your journey. In this instance, that would suggest expertise, high levels of organisation and natural healing abilities coming through when you release your grip a little.

Things don't need to be perfect for you to proceed forward with your plans. Your nervous system is very well attuned to correct timing, and with a Cap 10th house, timing is going to play a big part in how things unfold.

YOD - FINGER OF GOD

This energetic alignment is a combination of two sextiling energies which both point a 150 degree angle (quincunx) to an apex planet/star.

Quincunx's are seen as awkward/uncomfortable energetic conversations between planets/houses because at face value there's not too much in common with the energies.

Imagine the difference in approach between a Gemini moon and a Scorpio moon.

It's a completely different approach to processing experiences and emotions. There's a degree of confusion/incoherence in getting on the same page.

Some say the Yod energy requires constant adjustment which is likely done unconsciously until a point, potentially until a fated event where the Yod is activated, leading to a fork in the road to change the direction of a person's life in a destined way.

Once these energies are bought to conscious awareness, the apex point is empowered to a higher expression of consciousness. This aspect can generate serious gifts/ breakthroughs which have been leading up for many lifetimes.

You have 2 x Yods in your chart.

The way in which you direct/interpret the following energies may very well be different to what I've mentioned here, but as you feel into it, and apply these ideas/energetic templates, you can overlay your truth to it and make better sense of what these energies mean for you.

"A Yod is a test your soul has set for itself in this lifetime, to see how much you know about a topic.

 \star

You may never know exactly what the topic is. But you've studied it in prior lifetimes and done pretty well, so now you are in spiritual graduate school in this lifetime and this is sort of an exam you've designed for yourself to see how far you've come.

If you pass the test, you can accrue substantial benefits."

- Alice Portman

 \star

"I strongly believe that Yod in astrology is very significant and does live up to the hype as a very fated aspect pattern denoting a special mission or destiny in life."

Yod 1
Sun in Capricorn (11th) sextile Moon in Scorpio (8th)
inconjunct Chiron in Gemini (3rd)

Here we have your Sun and Moon, two very personal placements pointing to Chiron, the Wounded Healer. With Chiron in the 3rd in Gemini, we're talking about healing relative to your mind, mental patterns and communication.

With the Moon in Scorpio, in the 8th, this speaks of very, very deep emotions, quite possibly stemming from past life experiences, or just an earlier time in this life, where emotional wounds couldn't be processed. Perhaps this has lead to a blockage of speaking or accessing your souls truth, which may lead to possible mis-representation of self (Sun) in your social networks/ friendship groups (11th), or simply being able to express your true and authentic self (11th/5th axis) to the world.

With your Sun in Cap, this could lead to having very high walls up, protecting yourself, but sometimes limiting potentials because of the fear (Moon in Scorp in the 8th).

Knowing this — and knowing the strength of your soul — your Chiron placement activates, and through the struggle you learn your mind, the processes which don't serve you, and learn to summon the incredible transformative power (Moon in Scorpio) to master it (Cap), and as a result bring peace to your mind (Gemini) and your emotional body (Moon) so more of your light can shine (Sun), and you can communicate (Gemini) what you've learnt to others/your social groups, becoming a force of change.

It won't be a matter of preaching, you will just have an air of authority about you.

It's important to make friends with your mind, be gentle with it with Chiron in Gemini. Allow it time to process, and ask your Capricornian nature to have patience, as a Yod is a life-long process.

Yod 2
Jupiter in Aries (1st) sextile Chiron in Gemini (3rd)
inconjunct Moon in Scorpio (8th)

What's interesting is Chiron is involved in your other Yod, which is getting some very positive, benefic energy from Jupiter, pointing to your Moon. So, if there are mental-emotional struggles/incohesion, the warrior aspect of Aries and the benefic spirit of Jupiter is assisting Chiron through learning and experience as to how you can breakthrough those deep, entrenched fears/memories/wounds, and giving you immense spiritual support/highlighting your warrior spirit.

This is actually pretty cool. And I feel like, as you consiciously and unconsciously work on this, your emotional body (Scorpio Moon) opens to access the imprinted memories of this deep occult wisdom, which can come to the fore when all is working in harmony.

Studies (Jupiter) of the mind-body connection, particularly re: storing emotional wounds in the emotional body can really help. As can talking (Gemini) with a trusted healer/counseller/ therapist to dig deep into your psyche (Moon in the 8th), to explore past life experiences and fears you may have locked down, giving them a voice.

With Pluto and Mars surrounding, major transformation can occur, resulting in some particular spiritual experiences — somewhat otherworldly. You might feel very motivated (Mars) to embark on this work — it's a process, so allow yourself breaks to integrate the discoveries to make it worth your while.

Definitely, take your sweet time with this process, and don't feel the need to rush into anything. Feel into yourself and allow the right teacher/guide to present themselves to you synchronistically.

To have both Yods involving Chiron in Gemini, communication and what's backing your communication is worth enquiry. It would be a shame to have all this amazing creative potential and not be able to express it in a way that's relatable to/heard by others.

From this, and taking into account your Nodes, to me, it's like, the higher expression of Virgo is immense healing abilities and an excellent ability to communicate, as well as knowing the details enough to be put in a leadership position where others respect your natural grounded abilities. Spirit has a lot to say through you, and I guess with the Moon in Scorpio in the 8th, it will probably (if it feels right to you), be worth your while to sort out some deep, suppressed fears/resentments so that you can be the clear channel that your NN hopes for you.

(I hope that makes sense/isn't presumptive).

Again, practicing detachment in your endeavours, following through on your creative inspiration (i.e. completing projects) but loosening your reigns on the outcome and the reception of others is a practive that can bring great peace to your mind.

Grounded Action - The Action Your Soul Is Guiding You To Take

EARTHED

Learning how to be human. In the world, but not of it.

The challenge for all souls having a human experience is to be in the world, but not of it. To realize they are souls having a human experience and be fully conscious of it. To have their soul fully embody their body.

People's personalities tend to relate to either transcendence or immanence. Those who lean toward transcendence have a longing for the heavens and the metaphysical: they yearn for a personal experience with God and to be lost in the heavens; they're envious of the angels and are more comfortable praying and hanging out in the stars than on Earth.

Those who tend toward immanence have attached themselves more to Earth and their body. They spend more time thinking about things in this physical world rather than connecting with the heavens or their own mystical inner worlds. Being a fully embodied soul having a human experience means finding the balance between transcendence and immanence. Being in the world, but not of Most Starseeds are drawn toward transcendence. They're more comfortable with the angels and the heavens. Life on Earth can be more difficult for them. If this is you, you're being reminded that you chose to be a soul in a body on Earth. And you're being called to focus more of your energies in the physical world. To learn how to be human a soul in a human body, fully present to what life on Earth has to offer you.
